Comments:

Dear Sir/Madam,

I am not in favor of granting an exception for coal to explore wild forests. The continued use of coal as an energy source is not in our national interest, nor does it benefit the rest of the world. Forests however are important for the longterm health of our ecosystem and our planet. They take hundreds of years to create and only months or weeks to destroy. Please make dirty energy harder to use and value the forests and wild places we currently have. In the end what we value will be what survives.

All the best,

Sarah Fletcher
