If you want to destroy a beautiful, priceless Colorado land area to allow a private company and its owners to make a lot of money, not to mention a huge, irreversible destructive mess, then go through with this travesty.

You will, without a doubt end up on the wrong end of history, and your legacy will forever be tarnished along with the land you allow to be violated.

We do not need any more coal. It and other carbon-based energy sources are being phased out, the phasing of which is to not create a job loss shock in the industry. I say re-train the energy industry employees to work in other industries.

But, what about the destruction of irreplaceable land?

This type of destruction has to stop now. Ask your children and grandchildren what kind of world they would like to live in.
