Comments:

Dear United States Forest Service, I am encouraging you to stand with science, indigenous peoples and future American children to come, to please leave Precambrian fossils in situ. While I understand coal is a "cheap" abundant resource to exploit, the long term ramifications of a short term "fix" is incomprehensible. If you factor the rate of consumption by the destruction of the burning of this archaic fuel, your profit margin would be nil. The unaccounted externalities are massive and are no longer being overlooked. In keeping our America beautiful, protected and innovative, please look to alternative energy sources that do not destroy our home, but rather preserve it.

Thank You for your ability to change course in help solving the climate crisis by keeping the coal in the ground.
