Comments:

There are many things that could and should be commented upon with regard to this "Restoration" project. At this time I will comment on only one. When large companies are permitted to exploit the nation's resources, the government often assists them with amenities that they do not have to pay for. This merits the name Corporate Socialism, and is anathema in my opinion. In the case of forestry, it means that there are roads built for the transportation of trees out of the forest. These roads are called temporary, but often wind up being anything but temporary. There are many such roads in the national forests of this country and it would cost quite literally billions of dollars to put them into a state of proper maintenance. I believe that should be a cost of doing business. Furthermore, I do not believe any more roads should be built for that purpose in the forests until that cost of doing business is taken care of. At the very least, there should be no new roads added in this particular project and they should be taken out of the plan.

Thanks for your consideration.

Sincerely,

-jg
