Dear Supervisor Forson:

The Wallowa-Whitman, Umatilla and Ochoco National Forests' proposed logging would apparently decimate 953 square miles, building approximately 335 miles of sediment-producing roads and mud-filled streams even before a tree is removed--easily the largest timber sale in agency history. "Restore" natural resources/public lands? Stumpage can never be "resilient". Rather, this proposal is an outrageous excuse to desecrate and set the precedent for massive timber sales in other states.

Unacceptable.

Thank you for including this comment.
