Comments:

If timber harvested from Nat'l Forest lands cannot be processed within fifty miles of where it is growing, that timber should be left standing.

Old growth harvest should be restricted to dead and down or standing dead.

No new road building until all existing red pipes corrected.

Timber management should driven primarily by the need to address climate change.

Small stem thinning should be done in such a way that stumps are as flush to ground as possible.

No logging operations should commence or continue if 95% of logging crews cannot be obtained from the local resident workforce.

Any activities on karst should be limited to restoring past logging damage.

Sincerely

Mike Sallee
