Comments:

Hi,

This is a comment to voice my opposition to the proposed logging of 3,000 protected acres in the Daniel Boone National Forest, into areas that are the last viable colonies of the federally endangered Indian bats. We know how important bat populations are to these fragile eco-systems, and they have suffered to the point of near extinction from the white nose syndrome. Please consider that the overall health and viability of the regional ecosystem is worth so much more than a few acres of timber sales.

Thanks,
Warren Byrom
