Comments:

As a citizen of Alaska and one who resides within the Tongass National Forest, I am in favor of continuing the Roadless rule in AK and certainly within the Tongass. The timber industry is a dying form of harvesting our natural resources and should not be encouraged by building more roads for easy accessibility. The people who live and recreate in the Tongass desire to preserve its natural beauty and wildlife as long as possible, so we can pass it on to those who come after us. My vote would be to retain the Roadless Rule in all Alaska.
