I strongly urge you to keep the Roadless Rule in place in regards to Tongass National Forest. As a environmentalist, I know that undisrupted wildness is crucial to the biodiversity of an area. As one of the largest undisturbed rainforests, Tongass is both a unique, pristine area and crucial in our fight to reduce carbon in the atmosphere. It is imperative to the wildlife that lives there and to Alaska's economy in general. As a frequent traveler, I come to Alaska for the wild spaces and a return to the land as it once was. It's truly the last frontier. I will again be visiting in August of next year. I truly hope I can count on Alaska to remain as it is.
