Comments:

I'm an avid hunter and fisherman. I've hunted and fished in Idaho for the past 76 years and have watched public lands shrink to the point that it's hard to NOT see a no trespassing sign or orange painted posts informing you to STAY OUT. Some of the areas in Southern and Southeastern Idaho cannot be accessed hardly at all unless you travel many miles out of your way to get to an open public lands area. I'm saddened by this. I'm old and will not be around too much longer, but my kids will be and my grandkids will be. I tell them stories of places I used to hunt and they say, "but grandpa [dad], that's a housing development today." We need, In Idaho, to keep our pristine wild lands open to the public. We need to make Idaho a place people WANT to come to to enjoy nature and to be re-created without being told they can no longer camp or fish or hunt here anymore. DO NOT, I repeat, DO NOT sell of our public lands.
