Please, please do not close King Mountain to free flight! The site is a rare gem in a world where access restrictions are slowly and inexorably taking away my freedom to paraglide.

I flew King Mountain on the day of the total solar eclipse a few years ago. I travelled to Idaho to view the eclipse, but as always, brought my paraglider with me. After the eclipse the roads south were clogged and impassable, so I headed north through Arco. I didn't even know about King Mountain, but I talked to some people at a gas station who hang gliders in their truck. They kindly offered to take me up to launch. I was amazed, it was the most beautiful flight of my life, a little duplicate of the Alps in the USA.

In Europe, the idea of closing a site to flying would be greeted with horror. It ought invoke similar emotion in the USA, we are the beacon of freedom to the world.
