Comments:

King mountain is an historic flying site that has attracted hang gliding and paragliding pilots from all over the world to the area for decades. Hang gliding US nationals has been held at the site on multiple occasions and the local community has fully supported the events and free flyers that visit throughout the year. Cutting off access to this site in Moore, ID along the lost river range would be a huge loss to the flying community as it provides some of the premiere conditions in the US for free flight. Pilots are environmentally conscious people who take pride in their flying sites and preserving their natural state as much as possible, it is hard to think of a better group to be stewards of the land. I plead you to take into consideration leaving access to King Mountain open to allow future generations to experience this jewel in the wilderness.
