Dear Sir or Madam,

I strongly support option D for wild buffalo. We need more range to enable the native species of this continent to graze freely and thrive as they had when the Indigenous nations managed them and their habitat. Upon analysis I found that there were far more buffalo on the plains and surrounding habitat than our current cattle. Furthermore, they averaged nearly twice the size. In addition, they did not require supplemental feed, fencing, massive buildings, extensive highway systems, etc. to support them. They produced far more and much better quality meat 175 years ago than we do with our cattle industry today. We need to restore greater tracts of land for the buffalo to expand their range and provide the nation with a healthier meat that will make all of us much healthier and the environment healthier. Thank you, Greg Chester
