Comments:

The public testimony I heard at the early steps of this "project" was overwhelmingly opposed to it, even though the comment process seemed designed to un-enable many stakeholders from commenting. Now here we are anyway, at another public comment stage with minimal outreach, which I suspect will show an overwhelming lack of public support, which I suspect will be ignored. This is bad stewardship, US Forest Service. The POW LLA itself is an end run around NEPA. How can we comment on "design components, locations, methods" etc. when the Forest Service hasn't said exactly where trees will be cut and what sorts of support infrastructure will have to be built? I suppose it doesn't matter. You ask for comments, but don't listen. I really feel for those who still work in timber mills. I feel for the owners of the mills. But I do not want to see a public forest that is worth more standing felled to subsidize a fading industry. Don't cut old growth. Don't ignore the public good that you serve.
