My comments are an objection to the Final Chugach National Forest Land Management Plan as signed by Jeff E. Schramm, Forest Supervisor:

Perhaps, if the people objecting to Llamas as pack animals for tourism, are not aware of the scientific evidence that Llamas do not spread the diseases they are complaining about, they should not be allowed to have any of their horses or donkeys or whatever, in your park(s). If they are this ill informed, about the safety of Llamas, they may not know what diseases their own animals might convey to the park, as they obviously do not know the healthy aspects of Llamas. We all know this is about economics/money, not spreading diseases. My husband and I have traveled many times over the years, to your beautiful state for wildlife photography. I have owned Llamas for over 20 years in the lower 48. I would never condone anything or animal that would endanger any state, let alone beautiful Alaska.
