This website has been malfunctioning for the past 3 days and has effectively prevented or at least discouraged people from making comments during the Final Chugach Land Management Plan protest period. What is even more concerning is the pattern exhibited by Chugach National Forest of discouraging public involvement in the required NEPA process. Initially, Chugach National Forest denied opportunity for public comment during the 2018 draft stage public comment period by not saying anything at all about elimination of the commercial pack llama user group. Without any prior notice, that group was eliminated in the Final Chugach National Forest Land Management Plan. Then, in the Final plan, they spelled llamas with one "l" so that anyone word searching the document would effectively stand a very slim chance of discovering it.
