Comments:

Alaskans and Americans overwhelming support preserving the roadless rule and the complete ban on logging in the Tongass. It is a major carbon sink and it's destruction will result in the permanent loss of this resource as well as furthering damage from climate change to the sensitive local areas of Alaska. Shame on the forest service for considering abandoning the protection of this Alaskan resource. This is a public resource, not to be destroyed for the profits of the forest service and some foreign logging companies.
