Comments:

The forest service still has a huge list of salmon habitat restoration projects needing funding from the previous era of Industrial clear cut logging in SE Alaska.

As an Alaskan resident who utilizes salmon as a resource, I am increasingly dependent on coho salmon reared around the state and in the watersheds of SE Alaska. Coho live at least a year in fresh water and need the habitat provided by old growth forests. We need to fix the damage done before and learn from our mistakes. Do not log in the Tongass National Forest!
