Comments:

I grew up in Alaska and am heavily opposed to the development of the Tongass National Forest. This is a critical part of the world remaining in the fight against climate change. We need to be protecting these parcels of land for our children's future and finding new solutions not repeating poor decisions and major mistakes. This Forest once stretched from California to Alaska and parts of Canada. It is not huge. In reality it is quite small and needs to be protected for future generations and present planet health.
