The current Trump administration is doing anything and everything it can to squeeze the most they can out of our country. My preferred choice is option 1, leaving things as they are. With climate change an impending threat to our nation, and the world at large, we need to preserve any and all large tracts of untouched land. We're going to need all the carbon sinks we have at our disposal. In case I haven't made myself clear, I would like the logging industry to stay out of our old growth forests. If they want more lumber, plant it and wait, like everyone else.
