Comments:

I stood at the base of the General Sherman tree and was awestruck, humbled, wept in joy at this magnificent gift of nature. I walked through Muir Woods travelling back in time, expecting a dinosaur to emerge through massive ferns. I thought Ansel Adams accurately captured Yosemite until seeing it myself for the first time and everytime since then. My heart breaks at the high rate of destruction within the Amazon and at the scraping of grasslands and forest in my state for yet another housing tract and shopping center. Please stop, please protect. Make pristine your legacy for all life. You have that power. Save Alaska.
