I support maintenance of the roadless rule in the Tongass National Forest, except for the occasional exemption that might benefit green energy projects or other beneficial projects for Native Alaskan Communities. With the ever increasing human footprint across the globe, it is more important than ever that we preserve wilderness wherever possible. Alaska is one of our great wilderness treasures in the United States and we should prioritize preservation of this forest for its benefits to salmonids, wilderness values, and for the economic benefits of natural lands recreation that are important to Alaska's economy.
