Comments:

I strongly believe the Roadless Rule should stay in place for the Tongass National Forest. This land is the lungs of the United States and sacred to the First Nations people. It's a life source for locals, a playground for outdoor enthusiast and critical in absorbing carbon and helping fight climate change. I have had the pleasure of watching a good friend of mine live off this land and enjoy it for outdoor recreation, he's become part of the community there. The joys this land brings is felt by anyone who has heard stories about it, seen photos or have had the privilege to see it. I urge the forest service to keep preserving this land and support alternative #1 no action.
