Hello,

I believe opening up the roads to and through the Tongass National Forest is submitting a truly unique ecosystem to what has befallen most of the habitable world. Development in the name of prosperity and improving quality of life but in reality benefits those who do not live there and forever impacts the natural environment irreparably. We need to create and maintain strong protective policy so future legislators can know how much U.S. citizens care here and now. We love National Parks now because President Roosevelt, John Powell and John Muir loved the land so much they are now safely preserved for future generations. The Tongass National Forest is a delicate and diverse ecosystem and for those who live there, more acutely effective development aid could be a fuel tax credit, food and energy assistance, and better funding of public health institutions. There are other places open for logging that you have already made into a monoculture. Please don't make this national forest into another tree farm.

Thank you!
