I oppose the process called "condition-based management" as described in "Improving Conditions in the Blackwater Watershed" Management of our public lands in the USA should be as transparent and honest as possible. Commercial interests should have no place in public land management when environmental protection is at stake. Our public lands are meant as havens for wildlife and as places where citizens can experience the magnificent wild places in our beautiful country, not experience logging-scarred parks and forests with little diversity in plant and animal life.
