I, Henry Maier, do not support the idea of reducing restrictions on logging in the Tongass Forest of Alaska. Deforestation is a huge problem in America and is a large contributor to climate change. Not only will cutting down parts of the forest add stored CO2 to the atmosphere, but it will destroy important habitat for animals there. The U.S. government needs to better understand that forests are vital natural resources and are not expendable--they were not created to be used for human resources.
