Dear Forest Service,

My name is Zev Grifalconi Mandel, and I am thinking about breathing for the rest of my life. I need air. Forests produce about one third of the earths oxygen, I am twelve years old and have a long breathing life ahead of me. I live near Yosemite National Park, in California, but the air isn't the best here. The less trees that are cut in the Tongass forest, the cleaner the air here and there will be. I have been to Alaska twice, and would like to go again. I would like to see the trees and go fishing and hiking. You are doing a good job managing the forests and can do an even better job by keeping the Roadless Rule the same.

Sincerely,
