I support this project fully. My family and I frequent this area of the George Washington national forest. We have found the previous trail improvements to be a great thing as far as accessibility and ability for my son and I to use the trails. Many of the legacy trails are overgrown and washed out. This area in particular has the appropriate grade for beginner and intermediate mountain bike riders. At current it's difficult to access the eastern side of the narrow back ridge with the western side and the Tillman Road
