It seems a bit shady that a half-page ad for Midas Gold arrived in my mailbox encouraging me to submit a comment to "The U.S. Forest Service" when the website for submitting a comment is countidahoin.com, and not that of the forest service. The ad boasts of jobs and infrastructure improvement all slanted in their favor. I encourage you not to make your decision based on the information Midas Gold provides you in this manner, as it will obviously skew toward the "pro" column while allowing them to present the information as objectively obtained. I have not studied the project completely, but this sort of trickery makes me highly suspicious of how much Midas will claim as statistically accurate in their attempt to receive a favorable EIS. Please demand fair play of them. Thank You.
