The South Fork Salmon is a beautiful and wild place that provides significant recreation opportunities for boaters across the United States. As a boater, this is some of the most remote, challenging big water in the country. Resources like this, once destroyed cannot easily be returned to their original state. The value of this river, for the people alive to today and in the future is worth far more than any short term monetary gain from a mine. We need to preserve and protect this amazing resource.
