E-bike are NOT appropriate on trails.

The lazy people who ride them do not help build & maintain trails, and haven't got a clue the extent of the damage they do to them.

Human powered bikes have been excluded from wilderness areas, even though huge numbers of trails there were used for biking in the past and are completely compatible for that use.

E-bike need to be kept off of the trails, and restricted to dirt ROADS, as they are now, though there is zero enforcement, and trails are getting ruined by them.

The rules governing human powered bike use in wilderness areas need to be rewritten, they are far to restrictive.

Yes, lots of trails are not suitable for biking on, and it would damage them.

But there are vast numbers of trails within wilderness areas that are just fine to bike on. They should be opened up to recreational biking.

But Keep The E-Bikes Off The Trails
